

NO PAY FOR TRANSIT BOARD EMPLOYEES

Hylan Fight on Commission Stops Salaries of 1,000 as Courts Adjourn.

MANDAMUS IS DELAYED

Corporation Counsel Arranges to Pay Six of His Own Assistants.

The Board of Estimate having refused to appropriate any money to run the Transit Commission for the rest of this year, Chairman George McAneny posted yesterday a notice apprising the commission's employees that it is unable to assure them that they would be paid for any services rendered on and after today. The chairman explained to reporters that the commission has no money in its treasury and no prospect of money unless the mandamus order for which the commission has applied is forthcoming to compel the Board of Estimate to make the appropriations required of it under the transit act. The courts adjourn to-day for the summer, so that the question is one of speculation, the chairman said.

The failure of the Hylan administration to provide the money for the commission affects approximately 1,000 employees and their families. That total includes the 165 employees of the former Public Service Commission who, through the Hylan fight, have been deprived of their pay for the last two months.

The Mayor's use of these $1,500 and $2,000 a year civil service employees as pawns in his political game against the commission has cost them much suffering already. It was stated at the commission offices. Those who have been deprived of their pay for the last two months, it was said, have had to sell their Liberty bonds, mortgage what property they had and borrow wherever they could to feed their families and meet their other expenses. In the meantime, it appeared, John P. O'Brien, Corporation Counsel, in charge of the Hylan fight against the Transit Commission, has arranged to have six of his assistants, assigned to transit work and payable by the commission, paid through the regular channel. At the request of the Corporation Counsel, Chairman McAneny approved vouchers for them, just as he has been willing to do for all the other employees.

NEW PORT WARDEN TO-DAY.

Old Board of Eight Is Entertained by Incoming Force of Five.

The old Board of Port Wardens, consisting of eight members, which was supplanted by the last Legislature by a new board of five, held a farewell dinner yesterday at Tappan's, Sheepshead Bay, and greeted the new board, which will take office to-day. Former Gov. Smith, who appointed the old board, and several other politicians and friends attended the luncheon.

The only member of the old board to hold over is Charles W. Ferry, vice-president and the only Republican of that board, who will be vice-president of the new board. The other new members, all Republicans, are Michael H. Blake, Ambrose O'Neal, Alex J. Joa and Fred S. Pulver.

HERRMAN IS REAPPOINTED.

Special Sessions Justice Will Serve Ten More Years.

Mayor Hylan reappointed yesterday Moses Herrman as a Justice of Special Sessions for a full term of ten years at $10,000 a year. Justice Herrman has been on the bench for many years. He served first as a City Magistrate and later was advanced to Special Sessions.

The term of City Magistrate Joseph S. Schwab expired last night and that of Magistrate Robert C. Tan Eyck will expire to-night. The Mayor has not indicated what course he will pursue with regard to those vacancies.

WILD ANIMAL FRIGHTENS FOLK NEAR DUKE'S ESTATE

Looks Like Panther or Tiger and Vanishes Before Residents of Somerset County, N. J., Are Able to Sight Rifles for a Shot at It.

An animal which has been described variously as a panther and a tiger has been frightening persons in the vicinity of Somerville, N. J., for the last week, and is now believed to be hiding in the woods on the estate of James B. Duke, which is near Somerville, and which is one of the show places of the State. It was seen on the Duke place late Wednesday night.

The animal was seen first last Friday night by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brokaw of Somerville, who with their sons, William and Wilson Vanderveer, were sitting on the front stoop of the Brokaw home. It crossed the street slowly, and for a few minutes they thought it was a dog, but as it got nearer they saw it was too large and looked like a tiger or a panther. The Brokaws went into the house for rifles, but when they returned the animal had gone.

Since that time various small animals have been disappearing, one man reporting the loss of two calves. But not until Wednesday night was the animal seen again. Then Irving Schaeffer, assistant superintendent of the 2,000-acre Duke estate, saw it as he stepped outside his house about 11 o'clock. The animal ran away, however, before he could shoot at it.

STILLMAN IS SILENT UNDER MACK CROSS-EXAMINATION

Mrs. Leeds, a trip to Reston, the co-respondent's summer home at Stony Brook, L. I.; about trips to the Plaza Hotel, where Mrs. Leeds is said to have occupied an apartment last year and part of the present year. Following are a group of questions relating to Mrs. Leeds that the banker was asked and which he refused to answer:

"Were you at the Sloane Maternity Hospital in 1919 when Florence H. Leeds, alias Leeds, gave birth to a child?"

"Did Jay Leeds call you 'daddy'?"

"Do you know Isabelle Armstrong?"

"She was a nurse in your employ from October, 1917, to September, 1918?"

"Where is she now?"

"Have you been paying her wages since January, 1921?"

"Did you pay her car fare from California?"

"Were you ever in the secret service?"

"Did you ever state that you were in the secret service and that you were 'Leeds of the secret service'?"

Mr. Stillman was asked if he knew Hannah Johnson, Sophie Barikoff, Mary J. Farney, France Viala and Patrick Torbey, who will be witnesses for Mrs. Stillman, but the banker returned the same reply.

"Did you ever deny that you were the father of Jay Leeds?" continued Mr. Mack.

"Did you ever make the child any presents?"

"Were you in the room when Florence H. Leeds gave birth to a male child at Sloane Maternity Hospital on November 15, 1919?"

"Was your name given as the father of the child?"

"Turning to the alleged conspiracy between Mrs. Leeds and the banker, which Mr. Mack charged in his opening remarks Wednesday, the guardian asked:

"Did you ever talk with Florence Leeds about bringing an action against your wife?"

"When and where and how many times, and who was present?"

"Did you consult her before you brought this action?"

"What is the largest sum you ever gave her?"

"Was it $1,000, $2,000 or $3,000?"

"Did you object to going to Europe in 1919 and 1920 because it would separate you from Florence Lawlor?"

"Did you ever give her any jewelry?"

Purchase of Apartment.

Mr. Stillman was asked if he knew Frank A. Ivans, superintendent, of the apartment house at 84 East Eighty-sixth street, where Mrs. Stillman alleges, her husband lived with Mrs. Leeds as "Mr. and Mrs. Franklin H. Leeds." Mr. Mack inquired of the banker in particular as to whether he had referred to Mrs. Leeds as his wife in the presence of Mr. Ingram.

"Did you ever give to Florence Leeds a broadtail fur coat?"

"How much did you pay for the coat—$8,500 or $10,000?"

"Did you ever purchase a cooperative apartment on Park avenue?"

"How much did you pay for the apartment?"

"Did you ever make the coffee and get the rolls and bring them into the bedroom of the apartment at 84 East Eighty-sixth street in the morning?"

"At the time of making coffee had you stayed over night there?"

"Did you ever kiss Florence Leeds?"

This question caused the banker to squirm in his seat and mop his forehead nervously.

Mr. Mack then questioned Mr. Stillman about the bills of Mrs. Leeds in Miami; as to whether he had authorized their payment and as to whether it was not a fact that he knew of Mr. Rumfh, who is connected with the First National Bank of Miami.

Continuing, Mr. Mack asked:

"In November, 1920, were you aboard the yacht Modesty at the foot of Twenty-third street?"

"Did Florence Leeds complain to you that you had a woman named Helen aboard the boat?"

"Did you ever hug and kiss Florence Leeds on board the Modesty at Miami?"

"Did you and Mrs. Leeds drink champagne and cocktails on board the Modesty at Miami?"

The banker was questioned about a visit of "Helen," the alleged "woman of society," named as one of the correspondents in his wife's defence, to the Modesty as the yacht lay in the Hudson River, and as to whether he ever had been to an apartment at 290 West Eighty-sixth street.

In regard to "Clara," the third correspondent of Mrs. Stillman's defence, the banker was asked if he knew her or ever had visited her in her apartment at 242 West Forty-ninth street, New York city.

Slips of Jewel Purchases.

Mr. Mack produced twenty-five sales slips from Cartier & Tiffany's for purchases of jewelry at a cost totalling more than $150,000. He was asked if he had presented a pearl worth $18,000 and a gold and platinum mesh bag with the initials F. H. L. in rose diamonds to Mrs. Leeds. It was at that point that Mrs. Stillman arose and walked to another part of the room. As she passed one of her attorneys she remarked:

"And we could not even have a tennis court at Mondanville, N. Y., home of the banker."

Mr. Stillman refused to identify a signature signed to the sales slips said to be his, and refused to admit he had made the purchases.

He also refused to deny or affirm that he ever had his picture taken with Jay Leeds or that he knew the baby had been named after him; that he ever had introduced Mrs. Leeds as his wife to one S. Valentine Munn, a servant, or that in the presence of Mr. Munn Mrs. Leeds had referred to him as Mr. Leeds or Jay.

Just before the hearing was adjourned William Rand, Jr., one of Mr. Stillman's attorneys, asked whether he would be permitted to question Mr. Stillman tomorrow on redirect examination on the matter brought out in the cross-examination yesterday and to-day by John F. Brennan, chief counsel for Mrs. Stillman, and Mr. Mack. Referee Daniel J. Gleason said he would take the matter under consideration and announce his decision in the morning.

It is expected that the banker's attorneys will finish the presentation of their evidence by noon to-morrow and that there then will be an adjournment of two weeks in the hearings so that Mrs. Stillman's attorneys can prepare for the presentation of the defence.

Mark Simon, the rookie policeman who shot and killed Charles Hansen, a bartender, in the saloon of Joseph Zaengle at 363 Sumner avenue, Brooklyn, on April 30, received a sentence of from four to eight years in Sing Sing from Supreme Court Justice MacCraty in Brooklyn yesterday.

Simon was one of a party that entered the saloon in search of liquor. The others left when told no liquor had been sold since prohibition became effective. Simon stayed behind and during a quarrel shot the bartender.

CONVICTED IN BOND ROBBERY.

Ex-Messenger Who Tipped $460,000 Holdup Is Sentenced.

Antonio De Gregario, formerly a messenger for Kean, Taylor & Co., Wall street brokers, was sentenced yesterday to serve eight to sixteen years by Supreme Court Justice MacCraty in Brooklyn.

De Gregario was convicted of robbery after he had admitted "tipping" holdup men that messengers were leaving the brokerage office for the plant of Igoo Bros. in Williamsburg bearing $460,000 in Liberty bonds, with the result that the messengers were attacked and robbed. Some of the bonds have been recovered.

LOVE AT SIGHT, BEATING ON FIRST DAY, SAYS BRIDE

Two Swings to Jaw, Dragged Out of Bed and Around Room, Mark Start of Her Honeymoon, Is Plaintiff of Girl Who Had Short Courtship.

There was reminder for the headlong in love in Washington Heights court yesterday when Mrs. Gregory Millick, 19 years old, appeared as complainant against her husband, stating that they met two weeks ago and were married the day afterward, and that within that time he had developed habits of hitting her in the head, dragging her about by her hair and calling her incredible names.

"We met two weeks ago," she told Magistrate Sweetser, "and it was a case of love at first sight. The next day we were married and rented a flat for ourselves at 16 Audubon avenue. But now our dreams are all shattered."

With special reference to the morning of June 28, Mrs. Millick told how rapidly the honeymoon had waned.

"I was asleep that day," she said, "about 9 o'clock in the morning and he came into the room and said he wanted his breakfast right away. I guess I looked a little sleepy, and he must have thought I didn't show enough anxiety to please. Anyway he fetched me two swings to the jaw and dragged me out of bed and around the room."

Millick, when his turn came to speak up, admitted the basic facts, but denied that he had been aggressor.

"It's right up to the point where I asked her to cook breakfast," he said,

"but instead of me hitting her first it was she who landed on me with a slipper and I had to defend myself. I admit the fight lasted a couple of rounds. It ended when she telephoned her brothers and they came over and tried to do me up."

Here the brothers, Martin and Alfred Koeninger, were called upon for testimony and they admitted that they did go to beat Millick up but on the understanding that their sister was in danger. The part of the case which concerned them was dismissed thereupon, and Millick was found guilty of disorderly conduct and remanded overnight until his family life can be investigated.

Millick told interviewers after the court hearing that he was an inventor of novelty blotters for use in business offices. Mrs. Millick supplemented this description of himself with one of her own. She said that the number of blotters he invented was out of proportion to the time expended inventing them, and that those he did turn out had blotter rather than novelty as their main ingredient.

NEW YORK has a real enthusiasm for CAMELS

Camel Cigarettes were first offered to the public less than eight years ago. Within that short period of time numerous brands of cigarettes have come and gone.

But Camels—always sold in one size package only—have grown consistently and rapidly in popular favor. It is the remarkable, exclusive Camel blend that revolutionized cigarette smoking. There's nothing like it. And it's that Camel Quality blend of fine tobaccos that's winning smokers faster today than ever before.

You find no paid talkers, in the guise of private citizens, boosting Camels in cigar stores, restaurants, and hotels. Camels need none of this artificial, bought-and-paid-for enthusiasm. Camel Quality of itself has created the only enthusiasm that really counts—the hearty, sincere enthusiasm of millions of smokers for the cigarette they know is the best they can buy.

Like every man who does his own thinking, you want fine tobacco in your cigarettes. You can't beat the choice Turkish and Domestic tobaccos in the expert Camel blend.

It's smooth and mellow-mild. It has the taste and fragrance of perfect tobacco, perfectly blended.

And there's no cigarettey aftertaste.
